Noli fed up with bad news, specially if it's about him

By Cynthia O. Masao

He is a politician who has a career spanning 30 years in public service and business and still only too capable of reacting to bad news about his country with a shrug.

In 2009, he was elected as a senator and then a presidential adviser on security and peace building. He later decided to leave the position to become a private citizen and to focus on his business and political activities.

He is a man of many talents and has been a member of the Philippine House of Representatives, the Senate, and the Philippine Commission on Good Government.

He has also been a member of the Philippine Commission on Good Government, the Philippine Commission on the Future of the Philippines, and the Philippine Commission on the Future of the Philippines.

Boo! VAT jacks up prices

Consumers are protesting against the new value-added tax (VAT) which will be levied on all goods and services starting January 1, 1991. They say the tax will increase the cost of living and reduce the purchasing power of the masses.

Pivotal point

The new VAT is seen as a pivotal point in the economic development of the country. It is expected to generate additional revenue for the government and to encourage the growth of the private sector.

Cost distribution

The distribution of the cost of the VAT will be a major concern for businesses and consumers alike. It is expected that the cost will be passed on to the consumer.

Business organizations are also protesting against the new VAT. They say the tax will increase the cost of doing business and reduce the competitiveness of Philippine products in the international market.

Protesters

Protesters are holding demonstrations and rallies across the country to oppose the new VAT. They say the tax is a burden on the poor and will lead to inflation.

Verdict

The government has defended the new VAT, saying it is necessary for economic development. It has also promised to provide relief for the poor.

Some consumers are also protesting against the new VAT. They say the tax will increase the cost of living and reduce the purchasing power of the masses.

Public response

The public response to the new VAT has been mixed. Some people support it, while others oppose it. It is expected that the response will continue to be a topic of debate.

Business reaction

Business organizations are also protesting against the new VAT. They say the tax will increase the cost of doing business and reduce the competitiveness of Philippine products in the international market.
